

Personal Injury Case Study 1

Andrew Greenwood acted for a little girl who was involved in a tragic accident which rendered her tetraplegic.

The case initially was dealt with by a firm of solicitors in the South, even though the little girl was based in West Yorkshire.

Dissatisfied with the service and advice that they were receiving, the girl's family turned to Andrew who took over conduct of the case, and promptly sorted out an interim payment of £600,000.00 initially to enable an appropriate property to be bought for the little girl and so that adaptations to the new home to make life more bearable and more comfortable for her and her family could be undertaken.

Conclusion

The case eventually settled for a little under three million pounds.
